Q.1 Read the following extract carefully, choosing any one from them and answer. (5)

A king was very kind and just and loved his subjects very much. Everyone of his subjects had free access to him. He had a bell hung outside his palace. People in trouble would come and ring it. The King heard their complaints and redressed their wrong. In course of time, the rope wore away and somebody tied a vine to it. The king's minister had a fine horse. When the horse become old, its master thought it a burden and left it loose. The horse could now get nothing to eat and so was reduced to a skeleton. One day in search of food it came to the King's palace and to satisfy its hunger, it began to eat the vine tied to the rope. Now the bell began to ring. The king came and saw a horse. He sent for its master and asked him why he had neglected his horse. The minister was very much ashamed and began to look after the horse thereafter.

Question: –

- (i) Describe some qualities of the king?
- (ii) What did the king do when the bell rang?
- (iii) What happened after the rope, tied to the bell, was broken?

- (iv) Describe the horse which came before the king?

We sleep in different ways and at different times. But the ways of animals are even strange. The cold night in Europe and in North America make almost everyone to sleep in beds. The habit of sleeping in bed is not expensive, it is comfortable. But in parts of Asia and Africa the nights are so warm that people sleep comfortably without any cover at all.

Whether we spend our nights in a bed or not, sleeping takes up about a third of our lives. The amount of sleep that we need, however, varies greatly with age. New born babies, for example, sleep for about 20 hours each day. By the age of 12 years, about 10 hours sleep each night is enough. Adults usually need only 7 or 8 hours. Old people sometimes say that they sleep hardly at all but as you have no doubt noticed, they are good at taking little naps as they sit in the sunshine or beside the fire.

Of course, human being is not the only animal that need sleep. Some animals spend part of their lives asleep and so do all birds. Like human beings most birds stay awake during the hours of day – light and sleep at night.

Its about time somebody exploited that hoary old myth about childhood being the happiest period of your life. Childhood may certainly be falsely happy, but its greatest moments can't compare with the sheer joy of being an adult. Who ever asked a six year old for an opinion? Children don't have opinions or if they do, nobody notices. Adults choose the clothes their children will wear, the book they will read and the friends they will play with. Mother and father are kind but absolute dictators. This is an adult world and though children may be deeply loved, they have to be manipulated so as not to interfere too seriously with the lives of their elders. The essential difference between manhood and childhood is the same as the difference between independence and subjection.
